There really is something for everyone, with excellent cycling and walking trails, DOC rangers who have first-hand, in-depth local knowledge about New Zealand’s landscapes and wildlife, national parks, beaches and lakes, and excellent accommodation options to suit all budgets and tastes. There is an active tourism industry delivering a quality sustainable experience, who have safe principles and practices, and showcase true New Zealand hospitality. You can get around, a business displaying the Qualmark logo represents an organisation that has been assessed by independent business advisors against the highest standards of excellence, and delivers a quality sustainable experience.

While travelling in New Zealand I will:
- Respect nature, leaving no trace.
- Stay on marked trails.
- Use Environmentally Friendly Products.
- Refrain from putting litter on the ground.
- Use biodegradable cleaning products.
- Be aware of the local culture and traditions.
- Respect all wildlife and their habitat.
- Respect others, choosing to go on less crowded trails.
- Respect the local communities, buying from local businesses and supporting local initiatives.
- Respect your fellow visitors, keeping the trails clean and friendly.
- Respect the local environment, not introducing any non-native species or damaging the natural landscape.
- Respect the local heritage, not leaving any mark on the landscape.
- Respect the law, not breaking any laws.
- Respect the local culture, not disturbing any local traditions or customs.
- Respect the local economy, not overusing any local businesses.
- Respect the local communities, not disturbing any local services or facilities.
